

Complying with the GDPR

Introduction

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) comes into effect on May 25th and aims at unifying regulations related to data privacy policies in the European Union. This text reinforces people's rights and imposes a new accountability logic on entities involved by requiring them to take the necessary, appropriate measures to ensure a suitable level of security when processing personal data.

Why you should bother about it

Given the extent of these concepts and the fact that you are running an e-commerce business, it is highly likely that you process personal data. Also, GDPR affects not only every European company but also companies located outside of Europe which collect European citizens' personal data. Needless to say that no merchant can avoid it and store compliance upgrade is not an option.

Main requirements

Our GDPR module is available from your back office and is here to protect your customers' data. In short, they should be able to access their personal data, they have the right to data portability, obtain rectification and/or erasure of their personal data, and mostly give or withdraw their consent. For merchants, the law demands to keep a record of processing activities such as access, consent, and erasure.

Article 83 of the GDPR provides sanctions up to €20 million or, for a company, up to 4% of its total global annual turnover for the previous financial year.

The personal data that you can visualize in this interface will be used at two different levels:

- When a user requests access to his data: he gets a copy of his personal data collected on your store in PDF or CSV format.
- When a user requests data erasure: if you accept his request, his data will be removed permanently.

You can also process all of your users' data erasure requests that are done through your contact form and with your validation. Before accepting the data deletion request and deleting a user permanently from your database, we recommend you to download all of the invoices linked to his/her account.

For further details on data, you will be redirected to the customers part of the back office in order to manage all the profiles registered and have a look at the information they contain.

Note that this module also allows the deletion of guest accounts. Merchants just need to search for the exact email address or phone number.

Once the data erased, the user does not exist anymore (account and address are deleted from your database) but its invoices remain available with the order. Only his personal data are suppressed. His abandoned carts are transferred to an anonymous account while his orders are no longer associated with any customer account.
